

IZZY TAKES MEDAL AS CHAMP RUM FOE

Gotham Prohibition Enforcement Agent is Some Sleuth on the Job.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—When the ancient and secret order of Hooch Gusslers convenes in solemn, oath bound convocation its members may feel safe from the prying eyes of "rum-hounds" who might attempt to spot the party by unceremoniously seizing the liquid refreshments and dragging those present off to the house-gow. In other cities, where ordinary prohibition officers enforce the "eighteenth commandment" this feeling of safety might be justified; not so here.

For Izzy Einstein, the one-man booze squad, chameleon-like masquerader of the dry forces may be expected to drop in anywhere from an exclusive party in a Fifth av. millionaire's residence to a private gathering of East Side ward heeler. No amount of caution, no amount of secrecy can insure the prohibition law-breaker against the sudden and dramatic announcement of this dry sleuth that he is Izzy Einstein and that those present can prepare for a heavy fine or duration vile.

A Masquerader. When a group of convivial souls get together at the most exclusive clubs for actors to imbibe a nip of Scotch or synthetic Johnny Walker nobody can say for a certainty that they may not be among them, dressing in formal glad rags and chattering of scraps and scenery and "the profess."

Or it may be an undertaker's convention. In this case Izzy will be arrayed in all the somber habiliments of that morbid trade, and few indeed would recognize in this solemn young man anything but a business-like mortician.

When Izzy faces forth in pursuit of the Demon Rum said D. R. must do some fall going to dodge this super-detective of the prohibition force. His latest stunt was to appear on the big football field in Van Courtlandt Park, disguised as four elephants of a football team. The soiled and grim-faced warriors, with headgear tilted back and nose guards hanging from their belts, were more than the famous Izzy Einstein squad. At a little cafe near the park the four men roughly ordered the waiter to bring whiskey and to hurry it up. Others at the bar were convinced their order sounded almost like a college yell and that those were indeed and truly veterans of the gridiron.

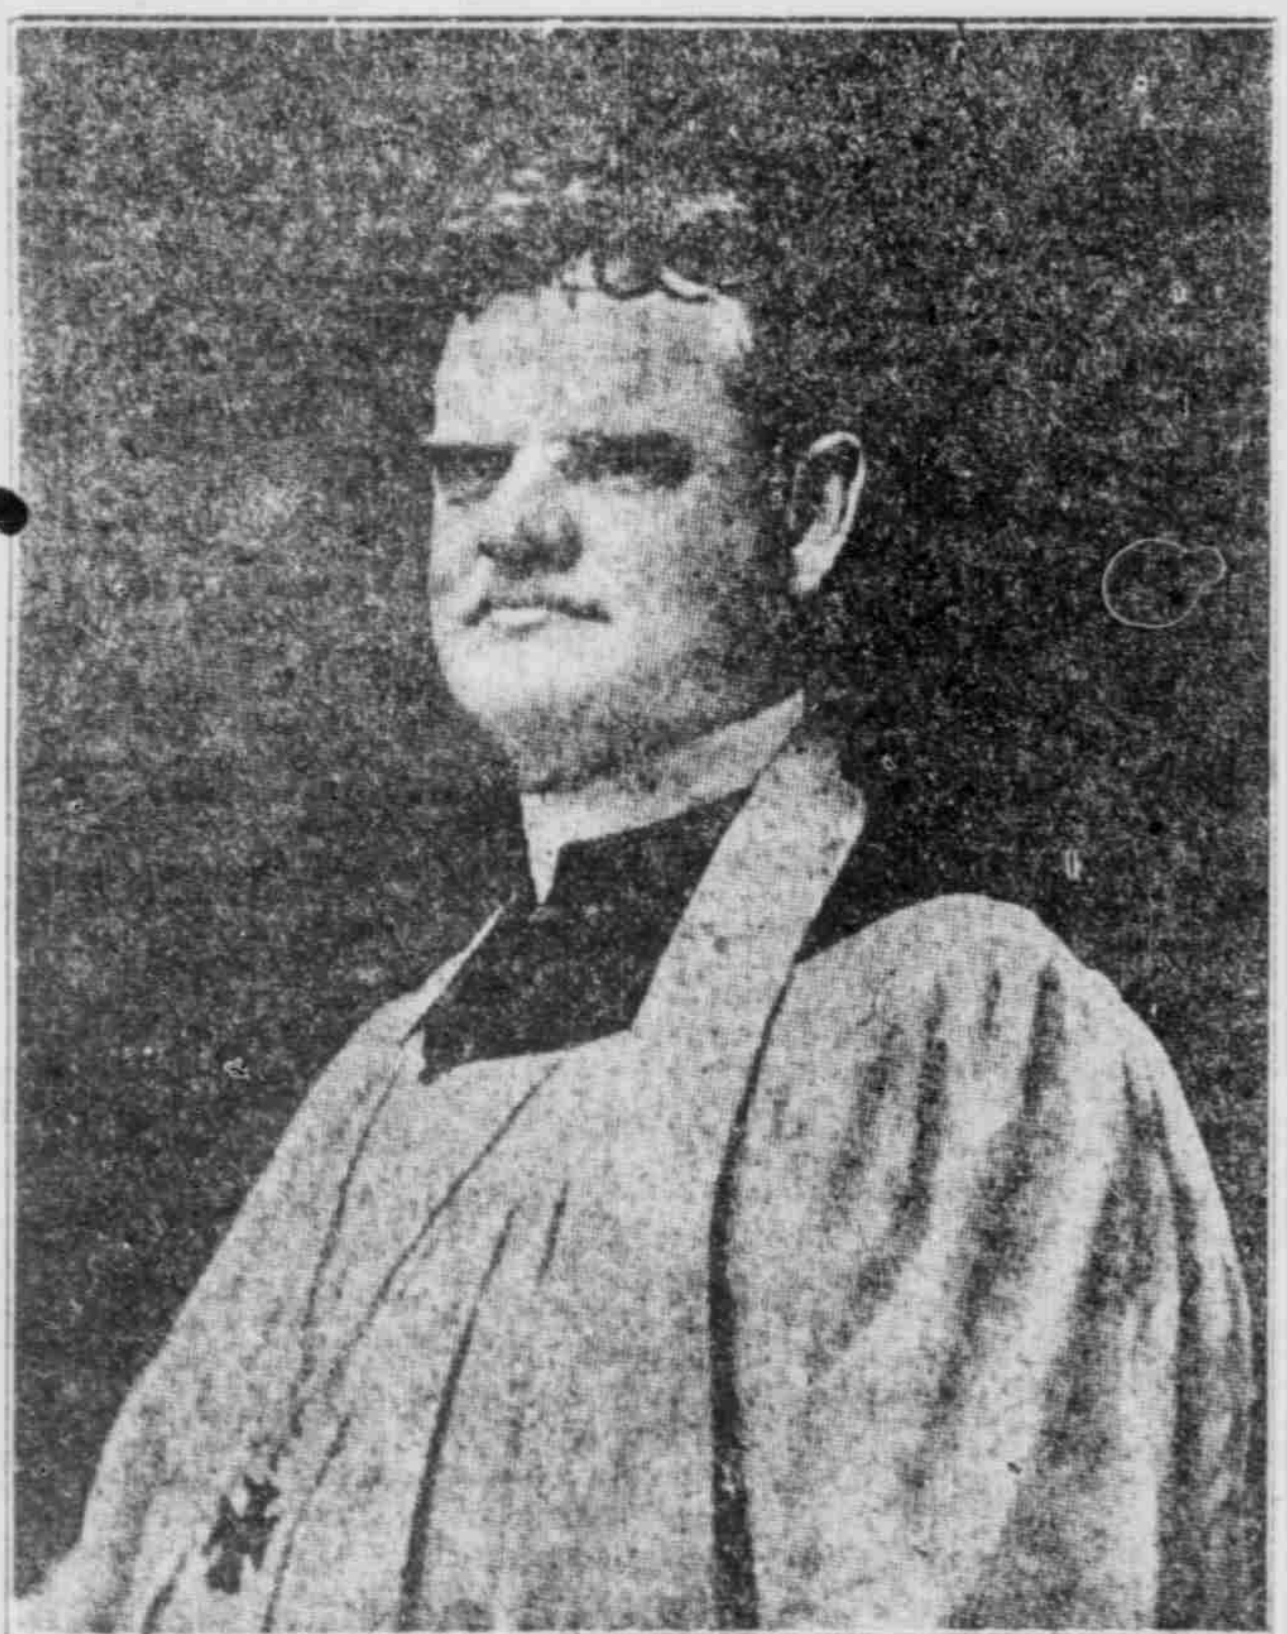

Highball Stars. Eddie, the waiter, saw too late that these were highball and not football stars. As it was he went unsuspiciously to his doom—somewhere in the back room—and returned with three small glasses. One of the gridiron heroes handed Eddie $2.50 to pay the $2.25 bill and waited patiently for his quarter back.

"Four-eight-seven-two" shouted one of the men, and at the signal the team got into action like a perfectly-oiled machine, despite the fact none had touched the lubrication in the glasses before them. Izzy impounded the evidence, and Eddie was turned over to the police on a charge of violating the well-known Volstead act.

In his comparatively brief career Izzy has impersonated a policeman, a politician, a movie actor, a newspaper reporter, a fireman, a truck driver and a longshoreman. His next may be a female impersonation.

"Not all alumni are bootleggers and felons," was one graduate's comment and he added that intimation that intoxicants flow freely at fraternities will keep many prospective students away and cost the institution heavily in appropriations.

Claims Japanese Are Now Leading A "Double Life"

Younger Generation Occidental, While Older Ones Stick to Chopsticks.

BY PAUL H. EGOLF.

(Special to News-Times.)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19.—Japan is leading a double life.

Such is the opinion of O. Toyoda, Imperial minister of railways of the Island Empire, who has been a visitor in Philadelphia. But the double life has no sinister meaning—rather a humorous one, for it is the product of the never-ending battle between the traditions of Nippon and the practicalities of the Occident.

Even old man High Cost of Living has invaded the Orient in quaint fashion, according to Mr. Toyoda, selecting the kimono as the prime object of his attack. Once the regulation dress of every respectable Japanese, the kimono is being rapidly driven out of the islands by the American ready-made suit, which, in addition to being cheaper than the native garment, allows the wearer to work unhampered by loose-flowing folds.

Even the children are now being clothed in rompers, overalls and other Yankee clothing, which gives the maximum amount of freedom in play, combined with ease of washing.

Prefer Chairs to Mats. "But it is in other phases of home life that the clash between the old and the new is being most severely felt," said Mr. Toyoda. "Many of the younger generation have gone to school and been engaged in business in Europe and America and become accustomed while there to sitting in chairs, thereby acquiring an aversion to return to the Oriental fashion of squatting on a mat."

"As the younger person returning to Nippon will not squat, so it is equally out of the question for the older people to sit up straight in high-backed chairs and preside at tables. The solution has been found in furnishing rooms to suit both generations, which, although it separates the family at social functions, is more suitable to the needs of the persons involved. This makes for 'jazz parties' in one part of the house and dignified recreation in the other."

The changes wrought by contact with the Occident have affected the family meal, as well, making it now practically impossible for a Japanese household to dine together.

Young Japs Like Beef. "During their trips to Europe and America a fondness for roast beef, mashed potatoes, French pastry and other articles of diet incompatible with the frugal Japanese diet of rice, egg and chicken combinations. Even tea, that firmly-rooted institution of Japanese life, is being threatened by the introduction of coffee or more exciting beverages. Again, this leads to a split in the home and necessitates the cook leading a 'double life,' unless the family is wealthy enough to employ two chefs to meet the tastes of the older folk and the younger gourmands."

In table service the conflict is again in evidence. Chopsticks for the elder; knives, forks and spoons for the younger members are seen, as well as a variety of dishes and tableware. Soup is now consumed in two melodies in different languages. Not only has the 'double-life' problem reached a point where it becomes serious in its social and economic aspect, but it forms one of the chief items in the upward march of the cost of living in the land of the Rising Sun.

FLOODS MENACE IN SOUTHERN LOWLANDS

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 19.—Streams throughout the state were reported rising rapidly today as a result of almost continuous rainfall of the last 48 hours.

The Wabash river is rising rapidly at Terre Haute and unless freezing weather sets in within the next 24 hours, it is feared a flood will occur. Low lands south of Terre Haute already are under water. Police were called upon in Indianapolis today to man boats to rescue a family marooned by the overflowing of Fall creek in the northern part of the city.

Traction service to Rushville was suspended as a result of a bridge washout at the edge of this city.

FEDERAL JUDGE HITS FIVE VICO RESORTS

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 19.—Attorneys for five road houses in Vigo county near Terre Haute, ran up the white flag and surrendered in federal court today in a government suit asking an injunction which would close their doors.

Noble Johnson of Vigo county declared it had been impossible to accomplish this through years of efforts in the Vigo courts. Johnson brought the matter before Dist. Atty. Van Nuys, who placed it before the court.

WINIFRED BLACK

The girls of this generation are well worth studying. In the high schools of the entire country, they are taking hold of the dress problem with no uncertain hand. One high school in California has taken up a crusade against extravagant dress in school, and has made progress along the road of good sense. They have placed a ban on silk stockings, silk dresses and thin blouses, and have agreed that when a girl has an engagement after school demanding elaborate dress, she should bring her finery in the morning and change her clothes in the school dressing room, before going to the place of her social entertainment.

In the case of one high school in New England, showy and expensive clothes for school are plainly discouraged on the grounds of suitability and extravagance. Many a fond parent who hasn't the good sense or the plain courage to dress girls properly for school, will be relieved to have the vexing matter taken out of her hands by the girls themselves.

The beauty and the charm of youth are enhanced by tasteful dress.

The matter of suitability is better understood, possibly in France, than in other countries. No French mother would array her daughter for school in the wasteful and ungainly fashion so often seen here. The French schoolgirl's hats and shoes must be plain, though much time is spent in getting just the right effects in color and texture.

Consider Other Countries. It is refreshing to see in our young girls the determination to dress in harmony with the requirements of good taste in school. No thin, skimpy material, no costly furs or other outer garments which anticipate the days to come when school days are left behind. Nothing of the gorgeous coloring affected by fashionable belles! For them, the bright clear colors of youth, and the easily-kept-clean gowns which are so becoming in the schoolroom.

Who does not delight to see a flock of schoolgirls coming along on their way to or from school, and all clad as they should be, simply and in good taste, which means, inexpensively.

Good Taste "The Thing." No drab and undetermined colors for me! I like to see girls in bright colors—reds and pinks and blues. Plaids and the varieties of the day are fine, but there are limits to the vagaries. The beauty of simplicity is supreme. Nothing can make up for it. When school days are over, the perfect taste of schoolgirl simplicity can be imitated but never realized.

So most of us would have girls, for every reason, dress simply and without straining for effect. After all, why give too much time to appearances just now? It is better to agree all together, on a style of dress.
